11 1 Jo lived in Baltimore with his adopted mother Ma Aku, Jo's wife, Anna, and their seven children.

2 Ma Aku and Anna cleaned houses together while Jo worked in the shipyard.
3 They lived as free people, not slaves.
4 Jo had been a slave once. He was only a baby, yet every time he saw one of the few slaves in Baltimore, he felt like he remembered.
5 When he saw the slaves, he understood how easily that could have been him if Ma Aku had not rescued him and taken him to freedom.
6 Ma Aku sometimes told him about their lives back in the South, about his mother and father, Ness and Sam, and all they had done to make sure he was free.
7 Jo was grateful. Because of them, he did not have to worry about picking cotton in a hot field somewhere, or being beaten and whipped by a cruel master.
8 He had to work hard in Baltimore, but at least he was free.

4 "Why didn't your parents want you to marry him?" asked Abena
5 "If you haven't married me by now, you won't ever marry me," said Abena to Ohene.
6 "Are you a ghost?" the old man asked.
