	Who said these words?	Who to?	When?	Why?
Life was different before 9/11. My mother told me that before, people were just interested in people who look like me. Now they see the hijab and think I've got a bomb. It's horrible.	Waris	Yazz	When people look at her strangely because of her hijab.	Because she wants to explain the racism she experiences.
Look at me? Do I look like I should be a slave or a servant?	Dominique	Amma	In the 1980s	Because she hates getting the same black parts to play.

	Who said these words?	Who to?	When?	Why?
I don't abuse my body.	Nzinga	Dominique	When they have just met.	Because she wants Dominique to believe that she lives a simpler, different, and purer life.
It doesn't matter how English your future husband will be or how English you pretend to be. You are Nigerian, and if you ever call me Mother again I'll beat you until you bleed.	Bummi	Carole	When Carole tells her mother that she is going to marry a white man.	Because Bummi wants Carole to understand her Nigerian identity and be proud of it.
We were just two people who went foreign. Nothing trailblazing about that.	Winsome	Rachel, her granddaughter	When Winsome tells her granddaughter about her experiences as an immigrant to the UK.	So she understands how hard it was and how they had to fight to survive.
A woman shouldn't have two masters.	Giles (Penelope's first husband)	Penelope	When Penelope wishes to go back to work after having children.	Because he doesn't want her to have a life outside the home; this shows how determined Penelope is to return to work even at the cost of her marriage.
I like the idea of being gender free and non-binary.	Megan/ Morgan	Bibi	When she is trying to understand her own identity.	It shows the different gender identities that exist and the need to find the right one.
